In Ranong, Thailand, they had the opportunity to meet the staff who are working with our confreres in the Marist Mission. They also visited the Harmony Center, which is still in its final stage of construction. It will be a place where leaders from different religions in the area can gather to strengthen links and to discuss about items of common concern.

In Davao, they visited the ten college students who are interested in becoming Marists and are living in the formation house. In the same compound the district has recently built a new chapel (see picture) which was blessed on 21 March by the Archbishop of Davao, Mgr. Romulo Valles.

They also visited the International Novitiate site which is currently being used for retreats while the novitiate is in Italy. A new building has been constructed with a classroom and rooms for the formators and for visitors.
